NOTES AND LEGEND

General Note:

1 The tree is derived from a variety of differing sources and is not claimed to be correct. However, it is considered a suitable startpoint for alignment with Y-chromosome test results. Note that:
- Dates are indicative as they may vary from one source to another.
- Not all recorded progeny of Carthach is shown. Further branches will be added if suspected pertinent to the McCarthy R-L21 Group B tree. The unrecorded progeny of cadet lines of each generation pertinent to the McCarthy R-L21 Group B tree are no less likely to accommodate ancestors of present day MacCarthys.
- SNP and key STR positions are approximate, but indicative of the branches on which they belong. Unless the possible range of their occurrence is indicated (e.g. Z255), they may have occurred in any generation later than that indicated up to the one prior to that under which the next mutation is marked.
- All SNPs cited are in Haplogroup R.

Notes used on chart:

2 Provenance is uncertain and varies from source to source.
3 Genetic testing to date does not support inclusion of this branch on this tree.
4 SNPs A10864/65 and A5070 are mutually exclusive. STR testing of Muskerry and Ardcanaght participants suggests they share at least one STR mutation subsequent to SNP A5813 which is not seen in the subclade of SNP A5070. The implication is that - providing the tree is correctly drawn in respect of their relationship - those who are positive for SNP A5070, despite being the majority under SNP A5813, must belong to a specific branch such as MacCarthys of Duhallow or Clandermond (for which Note 2 also applies) rather than the main Mór stem.
